Beverly Hills Salon Owner Ordered Back Into Federal Custody

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

Gina Bisignano, 52, one of the Beverly Hills residents facing charges related to her actions at the Jan. 6 Capitol riot, has been ordered back into federal custody after a judge issued an emergency stay of her release. The federal judge further ordered Bisignano transported to Washington, D.C. "for further proceedings on the Complaint filed against her."

Bisignano and two other Beverly Hills residents, John Strand, 37, and Dr. Simone Gold, 55, were arrested over the Martin Luther King Jr. Day holiday weekend by the FBI, with assistance by the Beverly Hills Police Department, pursuant to federal charges filed in Washington, D.C. They appeared in U. S. District Court for the Central District of California in downtown Los Angeles on Jan. 19. Both Gold and Bisignano were released on bail, although Bisignano's release has been stayed.

"The magistrate here in Los Angeles on Tuesday afternoon set bond for Bisignano, which we objected to on behalf of our colleagues in the District of Columbia," United States Attorney's Office Director of Media Relations Thom Mrozek told the Courier. (Salon Owner continues on page 3)

Amid Halting Rollout, Beverly Hills Provides Vaccine Information

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

As the United States marks the grim milestone of 400,000 deaths from COVID-19—once a worst case scenario—California and Los Angeles County struggle with rolling out the best tool against the pathogen. But even as wait times mushroom and phone lines buckle under traffic, the city and community of Beverly Hills have started to come together to put an end to the worst public health crisis of the last 100 years. The City of Beverly Hills has made an effort to communicate with residents through multiple channels in the hopes of demystifying the process. Meanwhile, pharmacies in Beverly Hills are also preparing to play a key role in distributing the vaccine to the community.

"As the county evolves, we're trying to keep up with it, keeping the communication current with the community and letting people know," said city spokesperson Keith Sterling. In particular, he cited two mass robocalls the city has made in the last week. "We typically don't do mass robocalls unless it's a significant event, but we felt that this was an appropriate use of the system to notify the community immediately that this option of 65 and older was now in play and that they could sign up online."

Sterling also pointed to the city's coronavirus information hub, www.beverlyhills.org/coronavirus, for updates and a direct link to the county site where applicable residents can sign up for the vaccine. (Vaccine continues on page 7)

Stinking Rose Project Runs Afoul of Planning Commission

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

At the Jan. 14 Planning Commission Regular Meeting, the Commission unanimously denied amendments that would have allowed the construction of a hotel on the Stinking Rose restaurant site. The proposal called for a 216-room, four-star hotel to replace the garlicky restaurant on 55 North La Cienega Boulevard, eliciting concern from neighbors who worried about the impact of the development on their quality of life. "Later that evening, prosecutors in D.C. obtained a stay and a detention order from a judge in D.C."

Bisignano, Strand and Gold each have close ties to the Beverly Hills Freedom Rally, the weekly pro-Trump demonstration that has taken place since July. In a story in the Jan. 15 issue of the Courier, "Beverly Hills Salon Owner Recounts Her Actions in D.C. Riots," Bisignano spoke about her role in the failed insurrection. In fact, the FBI's Statement of Facts for Bisignano, compiled by a member of the Bureau's Washington Field Office's Joint Terrorism Task Force, cites reporting by the Courier. The Courier conducted extensive interviews with Bisignano in the week after the attempted insurrection, in which she admitted to entering the Capitol, but claimed that she was escaping the throngs of rioters.

"BISIGNANO told the news outlet [Courier] that she filmed herself at the Capitol building, during the time when rioters had stolen police shields and were deploying pepper spray on the officers," according to the statement filed in federal court. "BISIGNANO also admitted entering the Capitol building itself through a window, the glass of which had been broken by another rioter."

The investigations into the Jan. 6 violence at the Capitol are being prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia. Nearly 90 cases have been filed against defendants residing across the country. Federal rules require that following an arrest, or surrender, defendants must make a first appearance before a district court magistrate/judge where the arrest takes place.

Bisignano faces charges of civil disorder; destruction of government property; aiding and abetting; obstruction of an official proceeding; restricted building or grounds; and violent entry or disorderly conduct. Gold and Strand have been charged with entering a restricted building or grounds, violent entry and disorderly conduct.

"I got caught up. I didn't do anything to hurt anybody," Bisignano, owner of Gina's Eyelashes and Skincare, told the Courier prior to her arrest. She went to the Capitol after President Trump called on his supporters to attend a rally on Jan. 6. "If enough patriots got together to rightfully assemble and put pressure, chant and cheer like we do, they would think, 'Okay, we the people—we the people are speaking.'"

Bisignano told the Courier that she had not committed any acts of vandalism or violence, decrying the violence that left five people dead, including a member of law enforcement. But in footage reviewed by the Courier, a woman who appears to be Bisignano can be seen throwing a water bottle in the direction of law enforcement as Trump supporters try to push through a blockade of riot police. "We need new people," she shouts to the crowd as police deploy pepper spray on the rioters.

Like Bisignano, Strand and Gold also heeded Trump's call, according to federal officials. Strand, the communications director for the Freedom Rally, describes himself on his personal website as a model and actor, with IMDB listing credits for the reality TV show "Vanderpump Rules" and the comedy show "Tosh.0." Gold, a medical doctor criticized for promoting misinformation about COVID-19 and the Coronavirus vaccine, has also attended and spoken at multiple Freedom Rallies. She confirmed to the Washington Post that she had gone into the Capitol with other rioters but insisted that she did not participate in or witness any violence.

All three appeared for their hearings on Jan. 19 at the Edward R. Roybal federal courthouse in downtown Los Angeles. The judge hearing the cases, United States Magistrate Judge John E. McDermott, granted bail for Gold and Strand, setting it at $15,000 and $20,000 respectively. While Gold left the courthouse that day, Strand did not find someone to guarantee his bail bond until later. A spokesperson for the U.S. Attorney's Office still had not seen release paperwork by the morning of Jan. 21.

But in Bisignano's case, the U.S. government came down hard, recommending that she should not receive bail and should remain in detention. "The defendant participated in a violent riot that was designed to prevent the United States Congress from certifying the valid, true results of the 2020 presidential election. So, to say that her alleged crimes were dangerous, not just to the community, but to American democracy and the rule of law itself, is an understatement," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Will Rollins.

Rollins even cited Bisignano's espousal of conspiracy theories as evidence for her "flight risk and dangerousness," telling the judge, "She's not likely to obey any pretrial release restrictions, because she doesn't believe in the legitimacy of the United States government, the rule of the law, or basic democratic process, and her sincere belief in conspiracy theories and the absence of rational evidence-based decision making show that she is extraordinarily unlikely to accept the legitimacy of this Court's orders, any federal law enforcement—especially those after a new administration takes over tomorrow—or obey any terms of pretrial release."

"That was a very colorful speech," rejoined Craig Harbaugh, Bisignano's attorney. "It is clear that Ms. Bisignano was present at a large-scale protest that was set up, not by anti-government forces, but by the President of the United States," he said.

"I think both sides have overstated things," said Judge McDermott. "I think the government is trying to make an example of Ms. Bisignano and trying to make her out to be a traitor. I also don't like the argument that she did it because of President Trump."

McDermott imposed $170,000 bail on Bisignano. She left the courthouse later that night but was back in custody on Jan. 20. Gold has a virtual hearing in Washington, D.C. on Jan. 21 at 1 p.m. and Strand will appear for a pretrial hearing in L.A. on Feb. 1. As of press time, Bisignano's next appearance is not listed on the court docket.

Many other members of the Beverly Hills Freedom Rally who attended the attempted insurrection remain out of custody as of now. But according to FBI Spokesperson Laura Eimiller, more arrests could be in the pipeline. "We can't rule out other investigations, but they are being done out of Washington, D.C. We only served the warrants for them," she told the Courier. She added, "We aren't interested in peaceful protestors." ●

Metro Announces Extended Work Hours at Ogden Yard

BY ANA FIGUEROA

Construction continues on the Metro Purple Line extension project.

Beginning Monday, January 25, work hours at Ogden Yard will increase to 24 hours a day, six to seven days per week. The extended hours will be in place for two months, in order to facilitate tunneling under the Wilshire Boulevard and San Vicente Boulevard intersection. Ogden Yard is located at 6010-6024 Wilshire Boulevard. It was acquired and repurposed as a construction staging yard for the Metro Purple Line Extension project in mid-2020.

As part of the Federal government's Coronavirus Guidance for America, transportation infrastructure is considered an "Essential Critical Infrastructure." Additionally, transit capital projects are not subject to the State of California's Stay at Home order, therefore Metro construction projects continue to progress. A temporary ventilation system will run at full speed 24 hours a day during the extended period.

During the extended hours at Ogden Yard, pedestrian access will be maintained, but certain public transportation routes will be affected. For example, the 720 bus stop at Wilshire and La Cienega Boulevards has been temporarily relocated to Willaman Drive. For more information, visit <https://www.metro.net/service/advisories/> ●

Local Businesses Join Effort to Recall Governor Newsom

BY BIANCA HEYWARD

Kitson on Robertson Boulevard

The effort to recall California Governor Gavin Newsom has gained momentum in recent weeks as local businesses join the movement, using their retail space to host petition signing events. The "Recall Gavin 2020" effort is comprised of "a grassroots army" seeking to collect the 1,495,709 valid signatures required to prompt a special statewide recall election. In order to succeed, the campaign must submit the nearly 1.5 million valid signed petitions—with ink on paper—from Californians by March 17 to the California Secretary of State. If certified, the measure to recall Newsom would be placed on the ballot during a special election in 2021. The measure would ask voters whether Newsom should be removed, and if so, who should replace him as governor. Newsom, who took office in Jan. of 2019, is currently in his first term.

Every governor since Ronald Reagan has faced a recall effort. The only one that succeeded, however, took place in 2003. Governor Gray Davis was recalled a few months into his second term and replaced by Arnold Schwarzenegger.

The effort to recall Newsom has the support of two prominent local businesses. Kitson, a boutique known for unique merchandise and a celebrity clientele, adorned its Robertson storefront with posters that read, "#1 New Year's Resolution, recall Gavin Newsom." Local Italian eatery, La Scala, also voiced outrage towards Newsom, posting recently on Instagram, "He's still an ass*le & needs to be recalled! Please come by & sign a petition this Saturday!!" Newsom, who was lauded at the onset of the pandemic for issuing the nation's first stay-at-home order, has drawn widespread criticism in recent weeks for the effects renewed orders have had on business. The Governor's perceived hypocrisy intensified after attending a swanky indoor dinner at the upscale Napa Valley restaurant the French Laundry days after prohibiting all indoor dining and urging the public to avoid such get-togethers. As of Jan. 20, the recall campaign told the Courier they have collected over 1.1 million signatures.

The Recall Gavin 2020 campaign began gathering signatures in June of 2020. The campaign's action plan reads simply: "We are confident that by reaching out to millions of Californians who have been betrayed by this governor, and by using the latest online and social media technology, we are going to give California's voters an opportunity to fire Gavin Newsom."

For a month now, volunteers have set up signing stations in front of La Scala's Canon Drive location. The Courier has learned that people are coming by the eatery every day to sign the petition.

"I know we have hundreds and hundreds, if not thousands of businesses that are actually being used as petition collection places, even La Scala restaurant," Randy Economy, a senior adviser to the recall effort, told the Courier. "I think the success of the campaign is coming from individual businesses and the people who are working doggedly every day at their business, passing the petition around physically. So, we've made it as simple but as aggressive as possible."

The restaurant made headlines earlier this month, after its invitations to a prohibition-themed speakeasy on New Year's Eve were made public.

"I think there's a frustration right now with government at all levels," Economy told the Courier. "And I think when Newsom decided to arbitrarily shut down California, he shut down the fifth largest economy in the world. And he didn't realize that the people that were being most effected weren't the big corporations and the big billionaires and stuff. It was the hardworking mom and pop businesses that were really struggling, who didn't have a way to get out of it. And then all of the sudden they had to apply for small business loans and do all these things that were foreign to them. And then every day it was a constant barrage of what you cannot do as opposed to what you could do. Nobody was allowed to have the ability to get involved with Newsom's decision-making process. It was all done through his executive orders."

According to Economy, the petition has attracted some 100,000 volunteers throughout California.

"It's not about political consultants and political action committees," Economy said. "It's just about people organizing who are passionately against a candidate."

Economy added: "Our job as the campaign is to do one thing, and that is to make sure that we are successful in getting the 1.497 million legal signatures that are required under state law to go ahead and to trigger a special election. That's our only job right now." ●

Blood Donations Urgently Needed

BY ANA FIGUEROA

Blood supplies are critically low in the Southland.

Los Angeles area hospitals are experiencing shortages of blood products this month. According to Armando Romero, associate director of Blood Donor Services at Cedars-Sinai, the supply has remained consistently low throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. The public is urged to make every possible effort to donate blood when possible.

"Community blood drives in places like high schools, colleges and churches are traditionally our biggest source for blood donations," Romero said. "With these venues closed and no longer hosting events like blood drives, we're struggling to keep up with demand."

Romero said that when the hospital can't supply the necessary blood from its own blood collection activities, it turns to outside sources like the American Red Cross. But increased demand for blood products from hospitals throughout the country has caused even those sources to run low on supply.

"What ends up happening is that we have to piece together blood deliveries from different sources," Romero said. "If, for example, we need 50 units of Type O blood, one source might be able to give us 20, another might be able to send us 25. We assess the situation daily to make sure we have enough to keep up with the next few days' demands."

Romero noted that with supplies so low, donations will likely be put to use within a short time. As a result, more patients will be able to safely undergo a surgery they need or receive lifesaving medical treatment.

Cedars-Sinai is taking precautions to keep donors safe and prevent the spread of the coronavirus, noted Romero. Appointments are spaced out so that there are fewer donors in the donation center at any given time, and donation beds are set up to create physical distancing. Donors must wear masks at all times when donating blood and are pre-screened for COVID-19 symptoms before entering the donation center. And there's a bonus: Each donor at Cedars-Sinai receives a free COVID-19 antibody test with their donation. This test can determine whether the donor has ever been exposed to the virus, although it does not determine immunity.

Appointments for donating blood at Cedars-Sinai can be made online at: <https://www.donatebloodcedars.org/index.cfm?group=op&es=true&bbsID=3>.

The Garden for Wildlife program recognizes local efforts to create and sustain gardens that serve as havens for local birds, butterflies, and other wildlife. The goal of Certified Wildlife Habitats is to help support the health and reproduction of local mammals, reptiles, amphibians, fish, and invertebrates including insect populations such as bees, which are important pollinators in the ecosystem.

"This is one of my favorite initiatives and I'm proud that our City has created two new Certified Wildlife Habitats through the Garden for Wildlife program of the National Wildlife Federation," said City of West Hollywood Mayor Pro Tempore Lauren Meister. "Not only will this help the City of West Hollywood meet its goals to become healthier, greener, and more wildlife-friendly. Every habitat garden is a step toward replenishing resources for wildlife, such as bees, butterflies, and birds. Climate change is real, and each thing we do to help our urban wildlife helps in the fight against climate change."

"Supporting and welcoming back native plants and animals to our City is part of our larger sustainability efforts," said City of West Hollywood Councilmember John D'Amico. "And we encourage everyone with a garden of any size to certify their garden as a Community Wildlife Habitat with NWF."

Backyards, urban gardens, container gardens, school grounds, businesses, places of worship, campuses, parks, farms, zoos, and community landscapes can all be recognized as Certified Wildlife Habitats through NWF. For nearly half a century, the NWF has engaged in wildlife conservation and education across the country. It has also recognized more than 227,000 Certified Wildlife Habitats which cover more than 2.5 million acres.

For more information about participating in NWF's Certified Wildlife Habitats Program, please visit www.nwf.org/garden-for-wildlife. Human Relations Commission Reviews Hate Crimes Report

BIANCA HEYWARD

The Human Relations Commission reviewed a hate crimes report from L.A. County.

The Beverly Hills Human Relations Commission met on Jan. 21, reviewing key findings from the 2019 Los Angeles County hate crimes report. The meeting came during a week marked by vandalism at Wilshire Boulevard Temple. Spray painted graffiti was discovered outside the Koreatown synagogue on Jan. 18, prompting the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) to open a hate crime investigation. Police said surveillance video showed an unidentified male in a hooded sweatshirt spray-painting the outside of the building with graffiti. KTLA5 reported that the vandal wrote the words “I hate your race” on the wall, with exclamation points punctuated with crosses.

A religious leader with national influence—as well as the Senior Rabbi of Wilshire Boulevard—Steve Leder appeared in the Courier’s Jan. 8 and Jan. 15 issues for a two-part interview.

“After declining for two years in a row, white supremacist crimes jumped 38 percent,” Marshall Wong from the Los Angeles County Commission on Human Relations said during the meeting. “And most frequently, these were swastikas or other hate symbols that appeared in graffiti on public or private property.”

“We documented 524 hate crimes in L.A. County in 2019, only one more than the previous year,” Wong said. “Hate crimes in L.A. County hit a low in 2013, and since they have been slowly rising and has increased 36 percent, which is cause for concern.”

The L.A. County Commission on Human Relations has been collecting and analyzing data on hate crime since 1980, and their annual report is one of the longest standing efforts on the part of a United States governmental agency to study the phenomenon of hate crime happening in our own backyard.

According to the Commission, in any given year, hate crimes motivated by race comprise of about half of all crimes. African Americans were again the largest group of victims. The second largest number of racial hate crime victims were Latinos.

The largest victim groups targeted are African Americans, gay men and lesbians, Jews and Latinos. Of the four largest groups, only anti-Jewish crimes increased in 2019.

The total number of hate crimes reported in Beverly Hills in 2019 is eight, which is a slight increase from five reported in 2018. Of those eight, five were motivated by religion, two by race, and one victim was targeted because of sexual orientation. Of the five motivated by religion, four were targeting the Jewish community and one targeting Catholics. Latinos, gay men and Middle Easterners were also targeted. The most common criminal offense was vandalism, followed by simple assaults and cases of intimidation or threats of violence.

“The second largest category by motivation is religious crimes,” Wong said. “Which actually grew 11 percent and comprise of 19 percent of all hate crimes. And the overwhelming majority, 89 percent, of these crimes were anti-Jewish. Sexual Orientation crimes also comprise 19 percent. Anti-transgender crimes, which make up the great majority of the gender and gender identity crimes, rose 64 percent from 25 to 41, the largest number ever reported.”

The largest number of hate crimes in comparison to the total population took place in the Metro Service Planning Area (SPA), which stretches from West Hollywood, Hollywood, Mid-Wilshire, Downtown L.A. and Boyle Heights. The second largest number of hate crimes occurred in the San Fernando Valley SPA, which includes Beverly Hills, L.A., Santa Monica and a number of the affluent beach communities. This marks the fourth year in a row that the West SPA had the second largest rate of hate crimes. ●

Current Events Stoke Anti-Semitism Fears on Holocaust Remembrance Day

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

As the world watched the vandalism at the Capitol on Jan. 6, one recurring image was of a participant wearing a sweatshirt that read, “Camp Auschwitz.” That individual was not alone, according to a report released by Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience at Rutgers University-New Brunswick and the Network Contagion Research Institute, which identified at least half a dozen neo-Nazi or white supremacist groups involved in the events of the day.

Scholars of extremism, anti-Semitism, and the Holocaust were dismayed, but not surprised, by what they saw that Wednesday. For years, they have sounded alarm bells as incidents of anti-Semitism ticked upwards and virulent conspiracy theories, redolent of those that fueled Nazi Germany, spread online unchecked. With International Holocaust Remembrance Day on Jan. 27, many of them spoke with the Courier about their thoughts on the failed insurrection, the intersection of extremism and anti-Semitism, and the importance of Holocaust education.

Dr. Stephen Smith, the Finci-Viterbi Executive Director of the USC Shoah Foundation and UNESCO Chair on Genocide Education, told the Courier he sees echoes and patterns of the past in the riot on Jan. 6. He draws parallels not to Nazi Germany, but to the Weimar Republic. “We are living in a democracy which has been unhinged by groups who are, first of all, polarized, but increasingly extreme, and then using propaganda and lies in order to be able to get political results,” he said. Smith compares the storming of the Capitol to the Reichstag fire that razed the German parliament four weeks after Hitler’s election and set the stage for his consolidation of power. “In a sense, this crowd was following a very similar direction, and there’s no question, Trump didn’t need to give directions to that crowd to be giving them instructions.”

For Anti-Defamation League (ADL) Los

Angeles Regional Director Jeffrey Abrams (Beverly Hills High School class of ‘85), the failure of the insurrection does not mean the end of these pernicious ideologies. “The anger and vitriol we saw on January 6th will not vanish anytime soon,” he told the Courier. “The conspiratorial, baseless narrative of a stolen election will continue to animate extremists for some time to come. The experts, analysts and researchers at ADL’s Center on Extremism are closely watching as extremists try to harness that anger for more nefarious efforts.”

Dov Waxman, the Rosalinde and Arthur Gilbert Foundation Chair in Israel Studies and director of the Y&S Nazarian Center for Israel Studies at UCLA, sounded a similar note of warning about the risks of further radicalization. “In the months and years to come, this threat is likely to grow, as these groups gain new recruits and more resources,” he told the Courier. “Just as Americans responded to the attack on 9/11 with a determination to defeat jihadist terrorism, we must now respond to the attack on 1/6 with a determination to defeat far-right extremism and domestic terrorism.”

Beyond a law enforcement approach, Abrams emphasized the importance of educating about the Holocaust as a tool to interrupt the cycle of radicalization. “We believe strongly that learning about the Holocaust and lessons of unchecked antisemitism and racism is one of the best ways to fight prejudice and discrimination, and to help ensure that genocide and such atrocities never happen again,” Abrams said about the ADL.

Waxman went even further, saying that education efforts should also include the United States’ own legacy of systemic discrimination. “We must learn from the bloody history of fascism and Nazism in Europe, and of white supremacism in the United States, that complacency or apathy can have devastating consequences,” he said. ●

Currently, three groups of residents are eligible for the vaccine, including: healthcare workers who have direct or indirect contact with patients or infectious materials; staff and residents at long-term care facilities; and people 65 years or older.

"We have a large senior community in Beverly Hills. That's why we felt it was imperative to get this message out yesterday to the community to let them know that this was now available with an option," Sterling said.

The county's system of phases and tiers seems to have caused some confusion for residents. Sterling says one of the most common questions the city has heard from residents is, "When can I get vaccinated?" The rollout is broken down into two phases, which, in turn, are subdivided by tiers and letters. For instance, the first tier of Phase 1A, the first groups to receive the vaccine, includes healthcare workers with the closest proximity to COVID-19 patients and residents at long-term care facilities. Tiers two and three expand access to more classes of healthcare workers.

The county moved on to the first tier of Phase 1B on Jan. 20, giving those 65 years or older access to the vaccine. Remaining in that tier is high-risk workers in education and childcare, emergency services, and food and agriculture. The county estimates that the rest of tier one will begin vaccination in early February. Phase 1B tier two expands the circle to other high-risk industries, including transportation and logistics, homeless shelters and services, critical manufacturing, incarcerated individuals, and unhoused people. The county expects vaccinations to start in tier two by late March.

Phase 1C, expected to begin in March, opens the vaccine up to those 50 to 64 years old and 16 to 49-year-olds with underlying health conditions or disabilities. Additionally, high risk workers in the following industries will have access: water and wastewater, defense, energy, chemical or hazardous materials, communications and IT, financial services, government operations or community-based essential functions. This phase has only one tier and the county anticipates that everyone in 1C will have been offered at least one dose by late April or early May.

Furthest out and most tentatively, with Phase 2, the county hopes to give everyone above 16 years access to the vaccine by mid-May or early June.

"The other thing we're really hearing today [Jan. 20], in particular, is the frustration with the county's website, being able to find an appointment, calling their information line, not talking to a live person. I think it's fair to say that the county is overwhelmed with requests, and the demand is extremely, extremely high for appointments and vaccines," Sterling said. "We're just communicating to our residents to be patient. We're continuing to communicate with the county on a regular basis, to express our concern about the delays and to make sure that the resources that our community needs are available as soon as possible."

The county COVID-19 website currently warns of massive wait times for signing up for appointments. "The Los Angeles County COVID-19 vaccination call center is experiencing a surge of thousands of callers seeking to schedule vaccination appointments, causing wait times as long as several hours," it reads. The site promises that the county is increasing staffing at call centers, but encourages residents with computer access to visit online. "The call center should be used only by residents with disabilities or who do not have computer access and need assistance to check for available appointments."

County Department of Public Health (Public Health) Director Barbara Ferrer warned that the combination of high interest and low stock would result in longer than desired waits. Add to that, every shipment of vaccine would need to be split to save units for second doses. "Of the vaccination doses that we received for this upcoming week, 73 percent of our allocation will need to be used for second doses. The little bit that remains, along with any vaccine that wasn't used the previous week, is what is available for us to use for appointments for those eligible to receive first doses. We just are not receiving enough vaccine doses to move as quickly as we would like," she said.

As it stands now, Beverly Hills residents must seek outside the city for the vaccine, according to Emergency Management Analyst Meena Janmohammed. The county brought five additional vaccination "mega sites" online Jan. 20, "in addition to a variety of smaller health care providers sites throughout the county," she told the Courier.

But Beverly Hills and its businesses stand ready to play a larger role in the process. The city has made clear to the county that it would transform Roxbury Park into a vaccine distribution center. The county has yet to seize on the offer, though. "Right now, the county is really moving towards bringing these mega sites online. We're not really seeing these smaller city sites come online at this time, but we are ready, able, and willing to bring that site on if Public Health does have us as a partner in that effort."

Along with Roxbury Park, many of Beverly Hills' pharmacies have signed up to participate in the inoculations. "Seventeen out of 22 of our local pharmacies have applied to be vaccine distribution sites in the city," Janmohammed said, though none have received approval yet. "There are a variety of qualifications which your pharmacy must be able to meet, including logistics, storage, training, [and] staffing."

Janmohammed pointed to one bright glimmer of hope: a new administration that has indicated it will take a more proactive role in vaccine distribution. "We do anticipate more resources, whether that's more vaccine, more support on the ground, more information about this rollout," she said about the recently inaugurated Biden Administration. "I think that this new administration will likely have additional resources to bring to the table and that will have a trickle-down effect to the States, the counties and the cities." ●

"I want to both thank and congratulate The Courier for its coverage of local events in general and of the events of the past week at Ralph's, Century City Mall, and in the City. It brings to home the reason why local journalism is vital to the community; we cannot rely on a news source that needs to cover an entire county (not to mention one that covers an entire country) to be there to report local news as effectively. Special thanks to Samuel Braslow for his on-the-spot reporting. As we have seen this week, journalism is a sometimes dangerous job and he deserves all praise for going above and beyond to record and report the news."

The Commission heard requests by Westland Real Estate Group for exemptions from several building codes necessary for its construction, including a zoning amendment, zone text amendment, planned development and general plan amendment. The rejection effectively quashes the possibility of the hotel in its present iteration.

“This is not going to happen like this,” Chair Peter Ostroff said. “This is just so far off of anything that we could really seriously consider that you need to go back to the drawing board.”

The denial marks yet another roadblock in the project’s history. Westland first proposed the development in 2016, and over the years, the company has revised its plans multiple times. At different points, the project has ranged from seven to nine stories, between 169 to 247 guest rooms, and between 164,645 and 287,384 square feet. But, as with the most recent iteration, the city has expressed concerns with the earlier proposals over their scale. On Aug. 19, the project came up for review by the Planning Commission liaisons, where the liaisons reiterated the city’s concern and indicated that it would not receive support.

In its latest version, the plans called for a 109-foot-tall structure accommodating 216 rooms with a total area of approximately 161,298 square feet. The first floor was to include commercial spaces, such as a restaurant, café, retail space, and a food market. The second floor would provide more conventional hotel amenities, like a bar, gym and sauna, business center, and a 5,259-square-foot terrace lounge. Above that: 216 hotel rooms with a pool and dining area on the roof. The plans include a 5-level underground parking lot with 358 spaces.

This version would require multiple amendments to city code, including the establishment of a new overlay zone and an amendment to the General Plan. Existing building requirements limit developments on the property to three stories, or 45 feet, well below the proposed 109 feet.

The project also rankled neighbors who live directly adjacent to the project site. The plans submitted by the developer show that parts of the ground floor would come right up against seven single-family residences with no setback and no ally as a buffer. The city’s existing regulations prohibit hotels by single-family residential zones. At the Jan. 14 meeting, the Commission heard from multiple concerned residents, including a few of the homeowners who live by the proposed development.

“When we bought our home in 2016, we were aware we were buying in a busy and developing neighborhood, but we expected the city of Beverly Hills to uphold existing building and code regulations,” one resident who lives by the site wrote to the commission. “We have young children and intend to remain in this neighborhood for decades to come, but we will be forced to reconsider our plans if this development, or anything higher than what current regulations allow, goes forward.”

Abraham Assil, the applicant for the project, defended the plans to the commission. He said the project represented an opportunity to put southeast Beverly Hills on the map, especially with a subway portal slated for construction just down the street. He characterized the disagreement with neighbors as a conflict between a fear of change and progress.

“I am well aware of the concern by some members of the community, particularly the elderly segment, for fear of change. These members of the community want to keep things as they are. I understand them. Change is difficult, but most often necessary, especially for progress,” Assil said. The vocal opposition to the proposal eclipsed a “silent majority,” he said. “Those with loans, families, all of whom are not outspoken or engaged, busy making a living, unable to take an active role and voice their preferences, but I believe they do wish for, they do desire, for a part of our south east to become a worthy destination, and not merely necessarily the subway portal.”

The commissioners were unmoved by Assil’s arguments. “It just seems like a non-starter to me,” Commissioner Andy Licht said. “It just seems too big, too massive, too tall for the area to me.”

Instead, some commissioners indicated support for other kinds of developments on the site. “I think you should be thinking in terms of what the city needs at this point. One of the things we need is housing and we need affordable housing,” Commissioner Thomas Hudnut said.

With the Commission’s no-go, Westland has expressed interest in submitting an alternative proposal for a 10-story, 270-unit mixed use apartment complex, according to the staff report compiled for the hearing. ●

Astrology

BY HOLIDAY MATIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's not that some are worthy of your attention and others aren't, but you can only give your attention to one at a time. Now, there is the matter of fitting the right offering to the one who can extract value from it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You would like to hear that you are the best at something, and you don't even care if it's true or not. Maybe it will become true in time, but right now the chiming sound of those melodious words is gift enough.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Great work in its early stages looks a lot like a mess, a blunder or a confusing pile of disparate elements. There are no failures, and no successes either -- only prototypes of varying effectiveness in serving the original purpose.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It's as though you have a committee inside of you, and you will do what the majority vote tells you to do. If there are conflicting ideas, expect inaction. You're hard to convince, even when you're the one doing the convincing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your instincts are dead-on. When you trust someone, you're open to their surprises. And when you don't trust someone, there is no reason to be involved at all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). There's no need to wonder about whether what you're giving today is good enough. You sense what others are missing and fill in the blanks for them. What could be more elegant than this?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The current cosmic alignment activates your play mode. You might even find yourself performing for your phone -- harmless enough, as long as you realize that there's something irreversible about hitting "send."

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The fortuitous arrangement has not been forthcoming. What gives? You don't like their offer. They don't respond to yours. It's all a signal to broaden the search terms.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). This weird bit is true: "Failing" at a new task is far more satisfying than succeeding at a task you've already mastered. The quotations are used because it's very possible that "failure" is just an early version of success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Others may be happy when you take the known road, but you're not in charge of the happiness of others, you're in charge of your own happiness, which is more likely to unfold when you take the other one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Sometimes, you need space, and other times you need closeness. You appreciate the one who understands the limits of intense engagements and follows up intensity with sweetness and distance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your empathy is a talent for sure, but it can also be overwhelming to feel so much for others when you cannot do anything about those feelings. Whatever you can do to be communicative and persuasive will help.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 22). You'll manage others like a boss, and you'll delegate like a psychic. The most impressive part is that you do this outside of a work context. Maybe it's a weird thing to celebrate, but you cannot argue this impressive fact of your talent -- people love being ordered around by you. The windfall comes in August. Pisces and Aries adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 5, 12, 28 and 17.
