BY JESSICA OGILVIE

The Beverly Hills Planning Commission at its Nov. 5 meeting denied a request for a development plan review and density bonus permit utilizing state Housing Accountability Act Builder’s Remedy provisions to allow for the construction of a 26-story, 200-unit multifamily residential project at 8844 Burton Way.

The commission voted 3-2 to deny the requests, with Commissioner Terri Kaplan and Chair Jeff Wolfe voting against the denial. See PLANNING COMMISSION, page 11

Buttigieg Appears at Fundraiser for Goldsmith State Senate Campaign

BY SAM MULICK

Former U.S. Transportation Secretary and presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg announced his support for Brian Goldsmith’s state senate candidacy for California’s 24th District. Buttigieg appeared at a fundraiser for Goldsmith in Los Angeles on Nov. 5.

Buttigieg and Goldsmith’s friendship dates to their time at Harvard College in the early 2000s. Both were leaders at the Harvard Institute of Politics. Buttigieg went on to become a naval officer, the mayor of South Bend, Indiana, the first openly gay presidential candidate for a major party and the Secretary of Transportation under the Biden administration. Goldsmith, a Beverly Hills resident whose family has generational roots in the city, worked as a journalist,

State Finds Race-Based Bullying at BHUSD

BY JESSICA OGILVIE

An Oct. 23 Decision of Appeal from the California Department of Education (CDE) found sufficient facts and evidence to support an allegation of race-based bullying and a racially hostile environment at Beverly Vista Middle School (BVMS).

The decision came following a complaint filed with the district in December 2024 by Victoria Tate, the parent of a student who attended BVMS. The complaint described an incident in November 2024 during which, among other things, a racial slur was used in a classroom followed by a student pointing at a group of Black students, including Tate’s child.

BHUSD initiated an investigation and concluded that the incident violated the district’s student conduct code. It took disciplinary measures against the perpetrators. It did not, however, agree that Tate’s child was “bullied, harassed and/or discriminated against on the basis of race.”

In response, Tate filed an appeal with the CDE.

In the Oct. 23 ruling, the CDE held that the incident was, in fact, “sufficiently severe to intimidate and create a sense of lack of safety for a reasonable Black student.” As such, it constituted a violation of the California Education Code and Title VI of the Civil Rights Act.

The CDE went on to state that the district’s response to the incident was inadequate.

“[T]he district did not specifically tie its response to the inappropriateness and unacceptability of targeting black students with racially charged references to the n word in their classroom, regardless of their prevalence or use in popular culture, entertainment, or the media,” the ruling states.

The CDE additionally assigned corrective action to the district, requiring a one-hour training at BVMS for administrators and staff about responding to allegations of peer-to-peer harassment and race-based bullying. The department included a requirement of proof of the training, including the date, attendees, content and provider information.

Tate brought the CDE’s ruling to the attention of the community during public comment at the BHUSD Nov. 4 board meeting. ●

UCLA Protestors Can Move Forward With Lawsuit

A judge has ruled that a group of UCLA professors and students can proceed for now in their lawsuit brought against the UC Regents in which they allege their rights to free speech and expression were violated when they and others, who are pro-Palestinian, were attacked by counter-protesters in spring 2024.

The Los Angeles Superior Court lawsuit was brought by UCLA professors Salih Can Asiksoz and Graeme Blair, as well as Bruin students Benjamin Kersten and Catherine Washington. The plaintiffs further contend the school administration was hostile to their cause, failed to protect them and ordered the May 1, 2024, dismantlement of their encampment that was put up on April 25, 2024.

‘Nuremberg’—A Trial

BY NEELY SWANSON

James Vanderbilt, as director and writer, has created a thoughtful, if flawed, film based on Jack El-Hai's book, "The Nazi and the Psychiatrist." Taking place before and during the famous Nuremberg trials that sought to bring about accountability for Nazi leaders still alive in 1945, Vanderbilt seeks to illuminate all the moving parts necessary to create such a forum. There had never been an attempt to put war criminals on trial. Even the term "war criminal" was a novelty. There were winners and losers, and very little neutral ground. But, recognizing that the almost successful effort to eradicate Jews from Western Europe made the goal of winning or losing a war almost insignificant when compared to such an unprecedented criminal act. The killing of soldiers and even the collateral damage of women and children in war zones paled in comparison to the wholesale targeted murder of people whose only "crime" was their belief system. Jews were not, of course, the only non-war targets. Their ranks were filled out by homosexuals, Romany (Gypsies) and the disabled, all thought to damage the purity of the German "race."

Recognizing that the Allies had humiliated and bankrupted Germany after the First World War, acts of revenge against a vanquished foe that created the atmosphere that brought Hitler to power, President Truman did not want to put the enemies on trial just because they lost the war. He tasked Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson with creating a tribunal of "justice" to hold the remaining Nazi hierarchy responsible for crimes against humanity. Truman was against the wholesale hanging of the perpetrators without a trial, something that our allies, especially the Russians, favored. Jackson must create a system that the rest of the world could trust—one that was seemingly devoid of obvious revenge against the losing side.

Following American common practice, one that remains today in potential capital cases, a psychiatrist, Lt. Col. Douglas Kelley, was assigned to assess the mental competence of the first group of defendants, among whom was Reichsmarschall Hermann Göring, second in command after Hitler and the highest-ranking Nazi captured alive. Assigned an interpreter, Sgt. Howie Triest, Kelley began his interviews using the tools available at that time. Administering Rorschach tests and interviews, he closely observed his subjects, amused by the disdain many showed, believing he was a Jew because he was part of what they considered a Jewish practice. Speaking to his subjects with the help of Triest, his interpreter, he is convinced that Göring was fluent in English despite his denials.

When Göring begins to trust him, Kelley tells Triest, they will be able to conduct their tests and interviews in English. And soon enough that happens. Kelley and Göring bond; so much so that Kelley is soon doing the Nazi's bidding, transporting letters back and forth to Mrs. Göring, in hiding from the Americans. Keeping copious notes, crossing boundaries that are clear, not only from his mandate from the army but also professional psychiatric parameters, Kelley feels he is mining gold, the kind of gold that may make him famous. He has, seemingly, allied himself with the enemy, at times grabbing the bait that Göring is tempting him with.

Cutting back and forth to Jackson's struggles to define the extent as well as the limitations of the court he is trying to create, we are given a firsthand view of how he brought about a court that was tasked with impartiality. Not insignificant was the difficulty in bringing the Russians into the fold. They were fully behind hanging them all. Jackson, knowing that the eyes of the world would be on this tribunal, assembles an unimpeachable cast of prosecutors, judges and jailers. He will be one of the prosecutors, aided by his British counterpart, David Maxwell-Fyfe. The danger, of course, is that any or all of the Nazis may be acquitted based on the evidence presented.

As Kelley slips further down the slippery slope of transference, his superiors, led by Burton C. Andrus, head of the prison, begin to doubt his impartiality and bring in a psychologist, Gustave Gilbert, whose agenda, a postwar book about those on trial, clouds his interpretation and skews the questions he uses to interview the war criminals. His postwar goals are not all that unlike those of Kelley. Discouraged and demoralized by his demotion, Kelley reveals to a journalist that he doubts that the prosecutors will be up to the task of convicting the brilliantly manipulative Göring.

There is a lot of good to be said about this film. Although heavy on the expositional side, it reveals much that is fairly new material. Vanderbilt wanted to give a 360-degree view of the tribunal process, from the building of the courtroom, the assembling of the prosecutorial pieces, to the process of determining competence, not just of the accused but also of the accusers. His storytelling was primarily divided into two parts: the story of Jackson, the Supreme Court justice who will establish new, international case law, and Kelley, the psychiatrist on whose research so much will hinge. The basis for the book was the story of Kelley and Göring. Ostensibly, everyone in this movie was based on a real individual; their motives and actions, however, are probably portrayed for dramatic effect. What was unmistakably real was the footage from the camps, used to support the prosecutors' contentions that the Nazis knew full well what was taking place throughout their territories, despite Göring's claims to the contrary.

Jackson, as played by Michael Shannon, is seen as having a great deal to lose. His is the most expositional of all the characters as he explains each and every move he makes. Shannon is a good enough actor that he triumphs over the expositional writing and allows us to experience the whys and wherefores of this new and important world court, so much of which will underpin future international trials.

Vanderbilt, however, based this film on the book about Kelley, so it's safe to assume that he intended that part of the film to dominate the rest. In Russell Crowe, he found a formidable actor to portray Göring. No histrionics, no extraneous gestures, Crowe's Göring fills the screen frighteningly with his brilliance and arrogance. As Kelley, unfortunately, Rami Malek is less than equal to Crowe's Göring. Full of ticks, nervous energy and speech mannerisms, Malek does not command the screen. From the narrative standpoint, it is hard to identify with his subjugation to his patient. His betrayal of his superiors and his turnaround at the end are not entirely believable. It is possible that his actions are straight out of the book, but even so, it's important to buy into all of his actions, and I didn't. A stronger, less eccentric actor might have been more effective.

In smaller roles, Burton Andrus, in charge of the prison, is played by John Slattery as a one-note villain. No one expects a sympathetic jailer who must oversee Nazi criminals, but surely he has more than a scowl in his repertoire.

Richard E. Grant as David Maxwell-Fyfe was particularly strong. His prosecutor, always above the fray, was ever so British, effectively stiff upper lip and sympathetic.

Leo Woodall as Sgt. Triest, the interpreter, was a scene stealer. Always quiet, wide-eyed and observant, he was the soft-focused brush of reality, questioning Kelley's actions but never inserting himself. The reveal of his background was poignant and worked to underscore his skepticism and heighten the sympathy he engendered.

Vanderbilt undermines his film by trying to tell too many stories. The drama and tension are kept too much in check. Not as dramatic as the 1961 movie classic "Judgment at Nuremberg," it is far more factual but much less emotional. A more effective and much better film is the documentary called "Filmmakers for the Prosecution." Directed by Jean-Christophe Klotz from an article written by Susan Schulberg, it documented the footage of atrocities uncovered by brothers Budd and Stuart Schulberg before the Nuremberg Trials, footage that was instrumental in proving Nazi intent and crimes.

The production design is outstanding, creating realistic World War II villages and bombed out buildings. Long, at 145 minutes, "Nuremberg" could have used some trimming and better editing. I wish it had been a more interesting film, but it does have a compelling performance by Russell Crowe that is reason enough to see it.

NOTICE OF ADOPTION OF ORDINANCE NO. 25-O-2925

The City Council of Beverly Hills, at its regular meeting held on Tuesday, October 28, 2025, at 7:00 p.m., in the Council Chamber of the City Hall, 455 N. Rexford Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90210, adopted Ordinance No. 25-O-2925 entitled:

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS AMENDING CHAPTER 3 (ZONING) OF TITLE 10 (PLANNING AND ZONING) OF THE BEVERLY HILLS MUNICIPAL CODE RELATED TO MULTI-FAMILY RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENT, OBJECTIVE DESIGN STANDARDS, AND FINDING THE ORDINANCE EXEMPT FROM THE CALIFORNIA ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY ACT (CEQA)

Summary of Ordinance No. 25-O-2925

This is a summary of the above entitled ordinance of the City of Beverly Hills. This summary has been prepared and published in accordance with the requirements of Government Code Section 36933.

The City Council adopted an ordinance to amend regulations applicable to multi-family residential development in Chapter 3 of the Beverly Hills Municipal Code (BHMC). The draft ordinance includes, but is not limited to, the following changes:
City Clerk

- Adoption of the Objective Design Standards (ODS) by reference;
- Simplification of façade modulation requirements and reduction of minimum unit sizes and clarification of other existing regulations, with no changes to the allowable density, building height, or setback requirements; and
- Amendments to the Architectural Review requirements and Development Plan Review procedure to reference the new exemption for ODS projects with up to five deviations from ODS standards through a density bonus project.

ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW

This project has been assessed in accordance with the authority and criteria contained in the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), the State CEQA Guidelines, and the environmental regulations of the City. The provisions of this Ordinance (including the ODS document and related code amendments) are within the scope of and consistent with the Addendum to the Mitigated Negative Declaration (MND) for the Amendments to the Adopted 2021 - 2029 City of Beverly Hills Housing Element (State Clearinghouse No. 2021090102), which was adopted by the City Council on March 18, 2024 and certified by the State Department of Housing and Community Development on May 1, 2024. The Ordinance also appears to qualify for the Class 5 Categorical exemption under CEQA Guidelines Section 15305 as a minor alternation in land use limitations because the amendments do not result in any changes to allowable density or land use, and the residential areas of the City to which the Amendments apply have an average slope of not more than 20%. Accordingly, the City Council will consider a recommendation to find the project categorically exempt from CEQA pursuant to the adopted Housing Element MND and Sections 15061(b)(3) and 15305 of Title 14 of the California Code of Regulations.

Those voting for or against adoption of Ordinance No. 25-O-2925 are as follows:

overruled a challenge to the lawsuit in which UC attorneys maintained that UCLA made the “reasoned decision” to request law enforcement assistance to clear the encampment immediately for the safety of the campus community. The UC Regents also contended that the school was immune from damages.

“The fact they did not declare an unlawful assembly while there was alleged violence occurring at the encampment, but instead waited nearly 24 hours until the violence had ended, is circumstantial evidence that defendants were motivated not by public safety but rather by, at least in part, plaintiffs’ protected speech activity,” the judge wrote.

and supporting candidates and causes that I believe in—in every part of the country,” Buttigieg said. “That said, I’m not doing a lot of state senate races, especially in blue states. So, let me explain what I’m doing. First of all, I’m here for my friend ... Brian is actually a true friend.”

Buttigieg recalled meeting Goldsmith for the first time at Harvard. During their first conversation, Goldsmith cited local policies in Buttigieg’s home state of Indiana—leading him to describe Goldsmith as having “a frighteningly encyclopedic knowledge of public affairs, history and politics.” He added that Goldsmith’s deep sense of concern for his community will make him an effective state senator.

“I’m convinced that our salvation will come from the bottom up, from people who are focused on solving problems,” Buttigieg said. “You can hear it in the way Brian talks. You can see it in the way that he communicates. He is focused on the basics at a time when we need to do more of that as a party and as a country. And he can connect that to the bigger picture issues that are going on and do so in a style that is not trying to drag people into our coalition, but actually welcoming people into a broader coalition.”

In tackling the needs of District 24, Goldsmith said the four focuses of his campaign are increasing affordability, tackling crime and homelessness, preparing for future issues of artificial intelligence and climate change, and fighting hate and division.

“We have to make it easier and more affordable for small businesses to survive here,” he said. “We have to make it easier and more affordable to build the infrastructure that we need in order to actually reach our clean energy goals, in order to make everyday life better for people getting from point A to B.”

Amid unprecedented attacks by the Trump administration on California—including on healthcare access, research universities, immigrant communities and international trade, Goldsmith said the most important actions will come from local leaders and state governments. Goldsmith also said that addressing climate change will help curtail natural disasters like the Palisades Fire—a wildfire that devastated parts of District 24 in January.

“We’ve got to focus less on refighting the battles of the past and more on how we prepare for the big challenges of our future,” he said. “How do we deal with disruptive technologies like AI, and quantum and automation? How do we deal with a world in which our kids are growing up with an epidemic of anxiety and depression because they’re glued to their screens? How do we deal with the costs and consequences of ignoring our climate obligations and facing increasingly disruptive events like the Palisades Fire earlier this year—that are going to come more often, not less often, and so we’ve got to be more ready for them.”

Democrats won major races across the country on Election Day, including gubernatorial races in New Jersey and Virginia and passing Proposition 50—a congressional redesign that favors Democrats in flipping House seats in the 2026 midterm elections. Buttigieg said that having a consistent message that speaks to voters’ most urgent needs is a winning recipe for Democrats.

“The reality is, you had candidates with different styles, different ideas, but one thing in common—which is a clear, disciplined focus on the cost of living, on what people are actually worried about every day,” he said. “These campaigns met people where they were substantively and also literally, in terms of going out and finding people in different spaces—physical, geographic and digital. And I think that points a way forward.”

Goldsmith, who has also been endorsed by developer Rick Caruso, former Senator Barbara Boxer and former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, said his political history makes him most equipped to represent District 24.

“I believe that I am a good fit for the district: our community supported Harris over Trump, but also supported Nathan Hochman and Prop. 36—I was on the side of the majority in each of those cases,” Goldsmith added. “I have lived in this district most of my life, and I am choosing to raise my family here. I believe I’m the right candidate in the right place at the right time.”

He also said that he hopes to meet the needs of the residents of Beverly Hills, a place he is proud to call home.

“I feel so lucky and privileged to live in Beverly Hills and believe it’s a model for effective local government,” he said. “Public services are accountable and responsive, the roads are in great condition, the schools are excellent, and our city’s government works collaboratively to get things done. If elected, of course I will continue to live and raise my family here, and I would always be responsive to the needs of our city.”

Goldsmith faces off against West Hollywood City Councilmember John Erickson and Dr. Sion Roy, the vice-chair of the Santa Monica College Board of Trustees, among other candidates in the June 2026 primary election. The two candidates with the most votes in the primary will then face each other in the November 2026 general election. ●

The proposed Burton Way project location

Developer Crescent Heights submitted an application for the Burton Way project in March 2024. The initial proposal was for a 20-story building with 40 affordable units. The application was revised to 26 stories and 22 affordable units earlier this year.

Commissioners Gary Ross and Myra Demeter and Vice Chair Lou Milkowski cited multiple bases for their denial on Nov. 5.

Ross and Demeter both referenced the project's feasibility.

"I think that the applicant has played games with what is and isn't feasible," said Ross, citing the project's reduction of affordable units and height increase.

Ross added, "None of us really know what the law is in its vagaries and its changing contours, in what way that a judge or a court would interpret the law. I can only interpret the law the way that I see it."

Demeter said she had hoped the developer would agree to reduce the project from 26 stories back to 20 and was disappointed they did not do so. She also stated that she believed the project would be feasible at a lower height and with the original number of affordable units.

"It's disturbing, because I really came in here hoping that we could work out something," said Demeter. "But unfortunately, I feel that what has been offered is not really going to work for me, and I don't mind if it's appealed to City Council."

Milkowski cited his belief that the project will have an impact upon public health or safety because it "conflicts with the city's general plan, use designation and zoning development standards, including density, outdoor living space and height."

"Specifically," he said, "It's a mammoth monstrosity that we haven't seen elsewhere."

Deliberations about the proposed project at 8844 Burton Way have been extensive and tense at times. On Oct. 21, the commission instructed city staff to draft language denying the project. That language was expected to be reviewed on Oct. 29 but was moved to Nov. 5.

Following the Oct. 21 decision, the commission received a letter from the California Department of Housing and Community Development reminding the city, among other things, of "its obligations under the Housing Accountability Act and specifically the requirements for making findings of denial."

There is now a 14-day appeal period during which anyone can appeal the commission's decision to City Council.

Dave Rand, the attorney for the project developer told the Courier after the hearing that "The Planning Commission majority completely and flagrantly ignored the law and we are going to vigorously pursue our rights starting with an appeal to City Council and litigation if necessary. The city is inviting the State to impose massive penalties for violations of state housing law." ●

BY HOLIDAY MATIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The people who inspire laughter, creativity and closeness can be the same people who bring you friction, misunderstandings and overwhelm. Blame chemistry. All in all, it's a blessing because either way, it's an invitation to grow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The mind doesn't store time; it stores impressions. A memory will light up your nervous system as though it's happening right now. Just because something is in the past doesn't mean that it's over.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The familiar falls away. Something extraordinary wants to come through. Release routine. There's a brief, scary space -- the void -- before the new reality forms. Before you even have time to feel that emptiness, something wondrous replaces it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The astral omens warn against crowdsourcing today, only because your vision is beautiful and clear, and extra opinions will only compromise or distort it. No need to reconcile conflicting ideas. Just act on your own.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Those who encounter your light feel more awake to their own. You're honest, and it's why people sense they can rely on you. In a world hungry for something real, your candor is both medicine and magnet.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're handling life with emotional intelligence. Self-respect is an inside job. Today you'll realize how you're really training your attention to go where it heals instead of where it hurts. Small things build genuine self-esteem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The way to freedom is through a little chosen restraint. Skip a luxury, delay gratification or sit with a craving instead of satisfying it right away. You'll find that the "need" quickly dissolves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Myths, love stories, art, political systems -- they are all constructs humans agreed to believe in, and they've shaped everything we know. Don't fear illusion. Use it. The line between delusion and creation is where humanity does its best work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There will be admin work to do, and there's no way around it -- only through. Try to find a way to make it fun for yourself -- rewards, music, small interruptions, a change of scenery... it all becomes a game instead of a grind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Unresolved emotion lingers. It doesn't dissolve just because the calendar turned. It waits, quietly influencing your relationships, fears or ambitions until it's acknowledged and integrated. The emotional past becomes the psychological present.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You get to know people by letting them teach you who they are. If each person is a classroom, you're showing up with coffee, awake to what's being taught. The lessons will come through more feelings than facts today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Exchanges leave you stronger and give you the sense that you're on the right path. Because the right kinds of challenges are regenerative, not exhausting. You'll naturally be drawn to (and attract) experiences that give back.

years, beginning when Cherniss, then the superintendent of the San Marino Unified School District, hired Gates to serve as the principal of San Marino High School. Under Gates' leadership, the school became the number one academically achieving high school in California for three consecutive years.

Gates' tenure at PYLUSD also overlapped with that of Cherniss, who served as superintendent of PYLUSD beginning in May 2023. Gates was brought on to PYLUSD in June 2023.

"There are so many accomplishments I could speak to, but what I would say [he does] best is his connections with people," Cherniss said. "We are hiring him for Human Resources ... he's taught just about every grade there is, but he also connects well with students, and he connects well with teachers."

In a statement, Gates said that he is "honored" by his new role.

"This is a community that deeply values excellence, possibility, and connection," he said. "I look forward to supporting our extraordinary staff and ensuring that BHUSD continues to be a place where every student is known, challenged, and supported."

There were some tense moments during the approval process for Gates at the Nov. 4 BHUSD board meeting.

Board Member Amanda Stern said she would abstain from voting on the agenda item that included Gates' appointment because "The announcement of [Gates'] appointment ... was unusually obscured and difficult to find in this agenda."

His appointment was included in an attachment to an agenda item on the consent calendar, which typically includes items that are approved collectively rather than discussed individually.

"My choice to abstain has little to do with the individual in question and more to do with what felt like a bungled hiring process that lacked the usual transparency and due diligence that is required for such a high-level hire," Stern said.

Cherniss replied that the approval arrangement was valid.

"This is the proper format to approve all personnel that are not under contract ... and I did confirm that today with counsel," he said.

The board voted 4-0 to approve the certified personnel report, which included Gates' appointment. Stern abstained from voting.

"This agenda item absolutely was not where it was supposed to be," Stern said. "It was obscured in a very unusual place. When something feels strange, it usually is." ●

Dear Loyal Readers,

For the past 60 years, The Beverly Hills Courier has delivered a vital, free, weekly publication to 30,000 homes and businesses in the city and six surrounding areas. We intend to continue this free community service with our award-winning newspaper and standalone glossy magazines throughout the year. We are, however, introducing a change in our delivery of digital content on Beverlyhillscourier.com.

Shortly, we will implement a subscription-based system for accessing content online. Readers will be asked to remit the modest sum of $8.00 per month (equal to a cup of coffee) or $90.00 per year to provide unlimited access to the online version of the Courier's weekly articles, magazine features, as well as archives of each.

We do not take this step lightly. Like most established publications, we see this as a necessity in these changing times. The fact is local journalism is more important than ever and is also more at risk than ever across the country.

We are proud that the Courier continues to serve a crucial mission for Beverly Hills. We invite you to become a subscriber at the suggested rates or with any additional sum you may be able to give.

Sincerely,
The Beverly Hills Courier Team
