Chamber of Commerce Hosts First Candidate Forum

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

Candidates for Beverly Hills City Council gathered for the first time on March 30 for a forum hosted by the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce (BHCC).

The June 7 election will see 11 candidates compete for three open City Council seats. Given that large number, the BHCC hosted two panels for the City Council forum, with six candidates participating in the first and three following them. Two City Council candidates, Darian Bojeaux and Akshat "AB" Bhatia did not participate.

Public safety took precedence in the City Council portion of the forum, with the three incumbents defending the Council's record of responding to the increase in crime and the challengers attempting to lay out an alternative to that record.

Candidates all agreed on the need to attract new officers to address staffing shortages in the Beverly Hills Police Department (BHPD). The candidates also found common ground in their support of the effort to recall District Attorney George Gascón, whose policies they blame for exacerbating crime in the city.

Warner Estate Gets First Touch-Ups by Bezos

BY SAMUEL BRASLOW

One of the largest properties in Beverly Hills will be getting a bit larger after the Planning Commission voted on March 24 to approve permits for the Jack L. Warner Estate, the Beverly Hills domicile of Amazon CEO and founder Jeff Bezos. The commission also recommended that the City Council adopt a new Safety Element for the first time since 2010.

The Warner Estate, named for its first and principal occupant, Warner Bros. co-founder and film impresario Jack L. Warner, currently consists of a two-story residence, a two-story guest house, a two-story gym and staff house, a pool house, a swimming pool and a tennis court. The recently approved permits allow for construction of a new pool house, a retaining wall, and the conversion of a crawl space to a powder room.

"I was absolutely astonished by the beauty of this project and the property, and I know it will be maintained in a fashion that it deserves to be maintained," said Commissioner Peter Ostroff.

Warner first developed the property at 1801 Angelo Drive in 1927. Nearly 10 years later, his second wife Ann Page tore down the original Spanish Colonial Revival manse Warner had built and commissioned a two-story Neoclassical structure with elements of Regency Revival Style from Beverly Hills Master Architect Roland E. Coate, Sr., who also designed All Saints Episcopal Church on Camden Drive.

Louis Vuitton Store on Rodeo Drive

This follows several other recent major arrests, including the arrest of five suspects for a robbery at Fendi next door to Louis Vuitton and one arrest for an attempted watch robbery in February.

Around 2 p.m. on March 31, BHPD responded to calls of a grand theft at Louis Vuitton. Vice Mayor Lili Bosse posted on the social media site Twitter 20 minutes later that two suspects had been arrested.

“Two suspects are arrested for grand theft at Louis Vuitton on N Rodeo. Thank you [Beverly Hills Police Department],” she wrote.

Representatives for the department did not immediately respond to multiple requests for comment.

Just a few days earlier, Louis Vuitton’s neighbor, Fendi, experienced a robbery.

On March 28, five men made away with merchandise from the luxury fashion store, according to Public Information Officer Lt. Giovanni Trejo. They fled the store on foot, assaulting a security guard who made an effort to stop the suspects, and then escaped in a getaway car.

The guard sustained minor injuries and is doing well, another security guard at Fendi told the Courier.

Detectives and officers with the BHPD identified the license plate of the vehicle. The next day, BHPD officers assisted by the California Highway Patrol (CHP) located and attempted to pull the car over, leading to a short vehicle pursuit.

Once the car chase ended in the Windsor Hills area, the five suspects in the car fled on foot. BHPD detectives immediately caught four of them, with the fifth suspect climbing onto the roof of a nearby home. In a joint effort with CHP and the Los Angeles Sheriffs Department, BHPD personnel convinced the suspect to surrender.

Police recovered all of the stolen Fendi merchandise, along with a loaded handgun.

Police identified all five suspects as residents of San Francisco. BHPD arrested and charged the following individuals for the robbery: Kelvin Burton, 27, Rodney Dewayne Moultrie Jr., 21, Dewan Lewis, 20, Juandell Carnelius Joseph, 33, and Antonio Lewis, 33. Moultrie Jr. faces an additional charge of possession of a loaded firearm.

“At this time, we do not believe these suspects are responsible for any other similar incidents in Beverly Hills,” Trejo said.

Then, the department announced an arrest for the Feb. 25 attempted robbery of a Ferrari driver. Video of the incident that circulated online showed two men punch and then strike another man with a handgun in an effort to steal his watch. One suspect fled on foot while the other left in a white SUV.

Detectives with the BHPD identified one of the suspects as Kavian Sims-Petty of Victorville. On March 9, in conjunction with the Los Angeles Police Department, BHPD conducted a search that resulted in Sims-Petty’s arrest for an unrelated homicide in Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles District Attorney’s office charged Sims-Petty with attempted robbery and assault with a firearm on March 10. He also faces charges for the Los Angeles homicide.

“The BHPD is continuing the investigation for other individuals, including the second suspect seen on multiple videos, attacking the victim,” Trejo said in a press release.

Police urged anyone with information about any of these crimes to call BHPD at 310-285-2125. Anonymous reports can be made by text to TIP BEVHILLSPD followed by the tip information to 888777. The public can also call Crime Stoppers at 800-222-8477. To access Crime Stoppers, download the “P3 Tips” mobile app or use the website <http://www.lacrimestoppers.org>. ●

Judge Issues Tentative Ruling in Beverly Hills Business Partner Feud

A Los Angeles Superior Court judge issued a tentative ruling on March 21 against real estate mogul Robert Barth in favor of his longtime business partner Stanley Black, finding that Barth had pocketed profits from the sale of a Beverly Hills property. The ruling, which has yet to become final, orders Barth to pay $13.4 million in total damages, a verdict that Barth's attorney vowed to appeal. (Tentative Ruling continues on page 15)

Beverly Hills City Treasurer Forum

BY BIANCA HEYWARD

At the March 30 election forum for City Treasurer, incumbent Howard Fisher participated virtually before an audience at the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce.

Two of the three candidates running for Beverly Hills City Treasurer participated in the March 30 forum hosted by the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce and Government Affairs Committee. In a 30-minute Q&A series moderated by David Mirharooni at the Chamber's boardroom, incumbent City Treasurer Howard Fisher (via Zoom) and businessman Jake Manaster made opening statements and took moderator and audience questions from residents, elected city officials, city staff and more. In addition to Fisher and Manaster, Gabrielle Pantera-Rowe is also running for the position. The event preceded the City Council election forum.

Current Treasurer Fisher has been in this role for the last five years. A product of the Beverly Hills Unified School District (BHUSD), Fisher is a tax and business attorney, with experience as a Traffic and Parking Commissioner, and as Chair on both the Planning Commission and the Public Works Commission. During the COVID-19 pandemic, he served on the city's COVID-19 Business Recovery Assistance Task Force to begin talks on how city policies and programs could best help the local economy.

"I've been involved in the city for decades and my business has been here for over 30 years," Fisher said. "I'm a graduate of Beverly High, my wife has worked in Beverly Hills longer than I have, she's been here for almost 45 years. I was a former Cub Scout leader, former member of the Board of Directors at Temple Emanuel. So, I've been around, I've been dedicated to this city and this community, and we've done a great job. We've never lost one penny on any investment that I've made in almost five years."

A Beverly Hills resident of 20 plus years, Manaster's experience includes serving on the BHUSD Board of Education, including one year as president, and also on the Traffic and Parking Commission, serving one year as Chair. An attorney by trade, he is currently President and CEO of Contract Carpet Corporation, a half century old flooring business in California.

"I am California born, and my children are fourth generation from Beverly Hills," Manaster said. "My wife went to Beverly High, along with my mother-in-law. I care deeply about this city. I would not be running for office if I did not care very deeply about the future of the city. My platform includes two new items that I think the city needs to consider." Citing financial blows from the pandemic, Manaster would form a committee of experts called "Bring back Beverly Hills" to better support the business community coming out of COVID-19 and establish a resiliency fund.

"Balancing the finances related to the surplus funds that the treasurer manages is something I'd be very skilled at doing," Manaster said. "To stand out, however, I would establish some additional surplus funds for the future that are not currently there and I'm hoping that the treasurer's office would be able to spearhead that and with the help and support of our City Council in being able to stabilize ourselves for the future. We have a great foundation in Beverly Hills, but one thing that I've noticed over the years is that we aren't always as forward as we might like."

While according to Fisher, budgeting is not a function of the City Treasurer, it's one of the areas he wants to focus on. "We need to start with the zero-based budget," Fisher said. "Look at each department, what programs need to be enhanced, what programs should be eliminated, or readjusted or reorganized in the departments. We really need to take a ground up look and make sure that this city is ready to function in this century."

JustinCase BH Holds Fire Extinguisher Drill

Residents learned how to operate fire extinguishers

The JustinCase BH program is connecting neighbors with neighbors to help each other in the event of a large emergency or a natural disaster affecting Beverly Hills by encouraging them to participate as Block Captains and Neighborhood Coordinators. The program has divided the city into nine geographical zones, and into two general zones.

On March 29, Justin Case BH South Coordinator Shirley Reitman engaged the community to take part in a fire extinguisher training provided by BHFD personnel. The training took place at Arnaz mini-park and gave neighbors the chance to put out a small fire, and learn how to properly use a fire extinguisher. ●

City Council Sunday Campaign Kickoffs

Campaign kickoff events are a long-time Beverly Hills tradition, and this year, they were back in full force. Five city council candidates, incumbents John Mirisch, Lester Friedman and Robert Wunderlich, as well as candidates Andy Licht and Vera Markowitz, held events on March 27.

At his kickoff on South El Camino Drive, Mayor Robert Wunderlich spoke about his vision for a second term. Key issues include strengthening public safety and city services, preserving residential neighborhoods, a vital commercial sector, bolstering sustainability practices, fostering a demographically diverse population, and promoting transparency in city government.

Councilmember Lester Friedman, whose slogan is “Yes on Les,” addressed the issues of public safety, support for the business community, and expanding health initiatives such as the nurse practitioner program to provide home health, mental wellness and social support. Friedman also spoke of investing in the southeast part of the city before the two Metro stations open to best serve residents and commuters.

Public Works Commissioner Sharona Nazarian attracted a crowd of some 250 supporters to the home of Azy and Farhad Farahmand on North Bedford Drive. “The three pillars in our community are our police, our fire, and our schools. And they’re fantastic. But you know what, we’re Beverly Hills, and we can do better,” said Nazarian in her remarks.

Lifelong resident of Beverly Hills and Planning Commission Chairman, Andy Licht, spoke of the need for increased security in the business corridor and residential neighborhoods in addition to economic development. Licht emphasized that his experience on the Planning Commission put him in a unique position to address housing and development proposals that are coming to the city.

Councilmember John Mirish's event was held at the home of Planning Commissioner Myra Demeter. Mirish spoke on a number of topics, including the need for additional mobile command centers for the BHPD. His remarks were followed by an address by Assistant Los Angeles District Attorney John McKinney, who spoke in support of the recall of District Attorney George Gascón.

Vera Markowitz greeted supporters at her morning kickoff event on North Elm Drive. Markowitz, a coordinator for the JustInCase BH program and a long-time resident, addressed the need for bringing about change to the City Council.

Oscar Night: Two Steps Forward and One Step Back

BY EVA RITVO, M.D.

Beverly Hills Courier columnist Dr. Eva Ritvo is a psychiatrist with 30 years' experience practicing in Miami Beach. She is the author of "Bekindr-The Transformative Power of Kindness" and the Co-Founder of the Bold Beauty Project. Dr. Ritvo received her undergraduate and medical degrees from UCLA and psychiatry residency training at Weill Cornell Medicine.

Progress is rarely linear. Our evolution towards a more compassionate and just society is often fraught with missteps as we are currently witnessing in Ukraine. As we have discussed time and again, danger will always capture our attention, and this is what happened on Oscar night. But be sure not to miss the monumental progress. Ironically, both the victories and the set-back relate to how aware and sensitively we treat the medical issues of others.

Will Smith slapping Chris Rock was shocking. I am glad that everyone is thinking and talking about it as there is much to learn about how we manage our hurt and anger. Jada Pinkett Smith looked absolutely gorgeous at the Oscars, and it was painful to watch her face fall as her medical condition became the butt of a joke. While I empathize with Will Smith's natural instinct to protect his wife, he impulsively chose the wrong path. We saw on live television his "fight or flight" response kick in and he acted from this place. The overwhelming consensus and in his own words his behavior was "unacceptable and inexcusable." He went on to say, "I was wrong, and I am embarrassed, and my actions are not indicative of the man I want to be. There is no place for violence in a world of love and kindness."

It is hard to think of a more complex moment, and his rapid response was startlingly out of place. This was a dramatic example of why we must think before we react. Taking a deep breath in times of distress goes a long way to help us engage the more evolved parts of our brain and help us come up with solutions that meet our well-intended goal to help those in pain.

Jada continues to bring much needed awareness to alopecia areata, an autoimmune disorder that causes hair loss. It affects 6.8 million people in the United States and is more than twice as common in women than men. It usually strikes those under 30, and there appears to be both environmental and genetic causes. The disease is painless but can cause psychological distress due to feeling of loss of control, worrying about health and changes in appearance.

Jada has shared her stages of the disease, and after years of struggle, she seems to have come to a place of acceptance. On Instagram a year ago she said, "Me and this alopecia are going to be friends." She is beautiful, radiant and a role model to women with this disease.

She helps all of us expand our narrow definition of beauty, and so we all evolve. The more beautiful images we see of her, the more we grow. Accepting any illness is a journey both for an individual, a family and for society and I respect her ability to share the process with us. It is not always easy as displayed Sunday night.

In the same way Jada raises our awareness, the Oscars made giant steps forward this year by honoring a movie that lets us peer into the lives of those affected by hearing loss. CODA (which stands for Children Of Deaf Adults) is a heartwarming movie starring deaf actors and actresses that depicts the home life of a family where both parents and one of two siblings are deaf. The story focuses on the one hearing daughter and her challenges balancing the needs of her family with her own need for independence.

CODA won best picture, best adapted screenplay for Sian Heder, and best supporting actor for Troy Kotsur. Troy joins his co-star Marlee Matlin as the only deaf actors to ever win Oscars for acting and he is only the third deaf actor ever nominated. These are important milestones as we journey to become a more diverse and inclusive society, and they should be celebrated.

One in eight people in the United States (approximately 30 million) aged 12 years or older has hearing loss in both ears. Approximately, 2% of adults aged 45 to 54 have disabling hearing loss, 8.5% for ages 55 to 64, 25% aged 65 to 74 and 50% of those over 75 and have disabling hearing loss. This is a disability that touches so many lives.

CODA has brought attention to this community in a powerful way, and we all grow by learning. Medical issues can be scary and when we don't understand things our anxiety naturally heightens. When we get exposed to the daily struggles of others as we do in this movie, we see that we are all more the same than different. Warmth and compassion replace fear and anxiety.

Einstein once said, "Our task must be to free ourselves...by widening our circles of compassion to embrace all living creatures and the whole of nature in its beauty." Trailblazing and brave women and men like Jada and Troy, and all the members of the CODA team help us do that. The more we get to know one another, the more we can acknowledge our differences and our similarities and achieve the goal so eloquently stated by Einstein almost 100 years ago.

There was indeed a lot to unpack from Sunday's event, and I hope that we can focus on the progress we are making to live in a more open and accepting society and learn from all we saw.

"Our ability to reach unity in diversity will be the beauty and test of our civilization."

The 94th Academy Awards ceremony took place on March 27 at the Dolby Theatre in Los Angeles. Hosted by Regina Hall, Amy Schumer and Wanda Sykes, the event was overshadowed by a slap heard and seen around the world. That did not, however, prevent attendees from enjoying what is traditionally Hollywood's biggest night. Here are some of the Courier's top photo selections from the evening.

Cheval Blanc Paris Earns Top Honor from Michelin

BY ANA FIGUEROA

April in Paris may presage Beverly Hills in the near future. Cheval Blanc Paris, the acclaimed hotel opened by luxury conglomerate LVMH last fall, is now home to a dining establishment with three Michelin stars. The honor was bestowed recently to the Arnaud Donckelehelmed Plénitude. The three-star highest rating from the prestigious Michelin guide is reserved for those culinary destinations that are “worth a special journey.” The honor is essentially unprecedented for a restaurant such as Plénitude, which opened but six months ago.

In fact, such a thing has happened only rarely in the last three decades.

Located on the hotel’s first floor, the intimate Plénitude features 26 seats overlooking the Seine. Donckele, described as a “saucier-parfumeur,” spent more than three years developing its cuisine. His handiwork catapults Plénitude into an elite club. Only 130 restaurants in the world have earned the coveted three Michelin stars, and Cheval Blanc is associated with two of them. The other celebrated establishment also overseen by Donckele is LaVague d’Or at Cheval Blanc St-Tropez.

“These stars recognize Arnaud Donckele’s years of hard work and his high standards. He is a genius-chemist who takes us on a journey full of emotion and poetry. He transforms each of his achievements into exceptional and continues to reinvent himself to continue surprising us every day and make us travel around a plate that is always unique,” said Olivier Lefebvre, CEO of Cheval Blanc Hotels.

As reported in the Courier, Cheval Blanc Paris opened to much acclaim last fall in the historic Art Deco Samaritaine building. The first urban hotel from LVMH faces Quai du Louvre, near Notre Dame Cathedral and the Louvre, in the heart of that great city.

Cheval Blanc Beverly Hills is set to open in the heart of another great city.

In this case, the renowned location is the corner of Rodeo Drive and South Santa Monica Boulevard, anchoring the city’s Business Triangle. Like its Parisian counterpart, Cheval Blanc Beverly Hills bears the hallmark of American architect and designer Peter Marino.

While Cheval Blanc Beverly Hills is still in the midst of the city’s approval process, plans for the 1.3-acre parcel include an ultra-luxury 115 guest room hotel, rooftop pools, ground-floor LVMH retail establishments and of course, fine dining venues.

Bernard Arnault, Chairman and CEO of LVMH, hinted exclusively to the Courier about what is to come.

“Honoring Plénitude at Cheval Blanc Paris with the highest possible rating from MICHELIN so soon after its opening, along with the universal acclaim for our world-class hotel, demonstrate Cheval Blanc’s uncompromising commitment to quality, excellence, and unrivaled hospitality. This is the Cheval Blanc standard. We hope to have the opportunity to deliver this premier level of service and refinement to Rodeo Drive at the proposed Cheval Blanc Beverly Hills, our first location in the United States,” said Arnault.

Cheval Blanc Beverly Hills will be in good company, joining locations in the Maldives and Saint Barth, as well as the aforementioned Paris and St. Tropez. ●

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum honored Jane Jelenko of Los Angeles with its National Leadership Award for her contributions to preserving Holocaust history and for rallying against antisemitism, genocide and Holocaust denial on March 30 at The Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The annual "What You Do Matters" Western Region Tribute event this year featured a special presentation that told the story of the destruction of Jewish life in Poland during the Holocaust and intertwined three individual accounts of resilience, hope and determination, including the three families who were honored with the Museum's National Leadership Award during the program.

Through the power of Holocaust history, the Museum challenges leaders and individuals worldwide to think critically about their role in society and to confront antisemitism and other forms of hate, prevent genocide, and promote human dignity. ●

BA.2 Subvariant of COVID Increases Grip in LA County

The BA.2 subvariant of COVID-19 is continuing to strengthen its presence in Los Angeles County, now accounting for nearly one-third of all virus cases that are screened for variants, the public health director said on March 31. The spread of the highly infectious variant, however, has not translated into a rise in virus-related hospitalizations, likely attributable to relatively high numbers of people who are vaccinated. For the week that ended March 12, 32% of COVID infections that underwent laboratory sequencing turned out to be the result of BA.2, which is an offshoot of the omicron variant that fueled a surge in cases over the winter months. Omicron is still the dominant variant found in the testing, but the percentage of BA.2 cases has been steadily increasing.

County Public Health Director Barbara Ferrer noted that since the testing reflects cases from two weeks ago, BA.2 most likely now accounts for an even higher percentage of COVID infections. But she said that as of March 27, only about 3% of visits to hospital emergency departments in the county are COVID-related. She added that the slowing of the decline could be related to the recent lifting of COVID health measures, such as indoor masking requirements.

"Every single time we have reduced the restrictions or levels of protection that are required, we have always seen an uptick (in cases)," Ferrer said.

The county on March 31 reported 784 new COVID cases, along with 16 additional virus-related deaths. The numbers raised the county's cumulative totals to 2,833,206 cases and 31,669. The average daily rate of people testing positive for the virus was 1.1% as of March 31, up slightly from the roughly 0.7% rate from the past few weeks. The rate was 0.9% on March 30.

Los Angeles County this week began offering second booster doses of COVID-19 vaccine, following approval of the additional Pfizer and Moderna shots by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. The additional boosters were authorized for people who are age 50 and over, and who received their last booster shot at least four months ago.

Boosters are also available for younger people who are considered immunocompromised and at higher risk of severe illness from the virus. Information about vaccination sites is available online at VaccinateLACounty.com. According to the county, as of March 27, 83% of eligible county residents age 5 and older had received at least one dose of COVID vaccine, and 75% were fully vaccinated. However, only 31% of children aged 5-11 have been fully vaccinated, the lowest rate of any age group. ● CNS ●

Beverly Hills residents Andrea Layne, Pam Mischel, Beth Michelson, Gina Seidel, Elinor Turner, Grazyna Simon and Barbara Marcus volunteered at The Blue Ribbon of the Music Center's 52nd Annual Children's Festival on March 22-25. The free four-day event is designed for fifth grade students throughout Los Angeles County. This year's performance was by a local hip-hop and street dance company, Versa-Style. After the performance the students did a special choreographed dance that incorporates music and movement from the live performance. Nearly 10,000 students participated. This year's event took place on the Plaza instead of inside the Pavilion. The students all received a copy of "A Journey Through The Music Center," a blue cap for the sun and a bottle of water due to the unusual warm temperature. ●

City Council candidate Darian Bojeaux held a kickoff event on March 26. An opponent of many of the proposed new commercial developments in the city, Bojeaux described her motivation for running. "I thought we've got to get some people to run for city council and change the majority. But I couldn't really get people, because who in their right mind would want to run for city council, really. So I stepped up as a reluctant candidate, and I just think I have to try to make a change, because I really don't like what they are trying to do here."

The case fractured a business relationship between Black and Barth that stretched back into the 1980s, when the two began investing in real estate together. They practiced an informal kind of commerce built on “handshake deals,” Judge Monica Bachner described in her tentative ruling. In one of their business ventures, “other than the initial formation documents, there were no written agreements, there was never a board of directors meeting, there were no corporate resolutions or minutes.”

The two would speak face-to-face multiple times a day, Bachner wrote.

“Until the fall of 2019, Barth and Black had offices in the same suite, separated by about 20 feet with a shared wall.”

Then, in 2017, Barth arranged the purchase of a handsome 11,000-square-foot Cape Cod home at 840 Greenway Drive through LLCs that he managed and in which Black was a minority stakeholder. The companies paid $17.1 million for the mansion.

The Greenway home soon attracted a tenant, Eric Baker, who leased the property until 2018, when he made an offer to purchase it for $21 million. Barth, acting as the agent for the LLCs, countered with $25 million, which Baker accepted. This would have generated millions in profit for Barth and his business partners, including Black.

But according to court documents, before the sale to Baker, Barth surreptitiously sold the house to himself from the LLCs for $16.9 million, a loss of $100,000. The proceeds of the $25 million transaction, then, went to himself.

“Barth violated his fiduciary duty of loyalty by engaging in self-dealing transactions, misappropriating the LLCs’ Greenway property at far less than its actual value, and then seizing for his own personal gain over $6 million in profits that the LLCs would have obtained from their pending sale agreement with Baker,” Bachner wrote.

The ruling, if made final, would award Black and the other investors $6,692,740 in compensatory damages for the lost profits on the sale of the house and $6,692,740 in punitive damages.

Howard King, an attorney for Black, praised the tentative ruling.

“Following nine trial days of Barth’s attempts to obscure the truth, we are gratified the Judge saw this for what it was, a theft by a fiduciary of his investors’ funds,” he told the Courier. “The unusual award of more than $6 million in punitive damages is confirmation of the outrageousness of Barth’s behavior.”

Robert Klieger, an attorney for Barth, described his client as “disappointed” by the tentative ruling and reiterated his defense that “Mr. Barth intended to purchase the Greenway house as his personal residence from the start.”

Barth only sold the house “[b]ecause the renter’s offer to purchase far exceeded the price Mr. Barth had agreed to pay for Greenway,” Klieger said.

This argument relies on a timeline of events that the court ultimately rejected, finding that Barth had purchased the property only after Baker had agreed to the $25 million price tag, suggesting he had planned to sell the property all along.

Klieger further claimed that Black’s daughter and grandson were the driving force behind the lawsuit, not Black himself.

“Medical records that plaintiffs withheld until just before trial revealed that Mr. Black was already suffering from pronounced dementia at the time of the filing and was almost certainly incapable of directing this lawsuit,” he said. “The Greenway transaction was consistent with numerous transactions that Mr. Barth and Mr. Black have undertaken for the benefit of their investors, and, had Mr. Black been competent to testify, we are confident that he would have been the first to speak out in Mr. Barth’s defense.”

As the case draws closer to a final judgment, Barth and Black will return to court on April 17 in a case involving allegations that Barth stole nearly $2 million from accounts held jointly by himself and Black. The judge in that case is expected to schedule a trial date to take place within the next couple of months.

Before then, Klieger says that he plans to file objections to the tentative ruling on April 5, a step necessary for appealing the filing decision.

“Assuming the tentative order is adopted as is, Mr. Barth does intend to appeal the ruling and is confident that the ruling will be reversed and that his position will be vindicated on appeal,” he said. ●

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Your power won't grow from shunning the parts of you that you don't like, but from integrating all parts of you and accepting the polarities: good and bad, strong and weak, yin and yang.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). From the outside it may seem that everyone on the inside gets along famously, but groups are more typically held together by tension than by harmony.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You might think that people who are a little like you will follow the same lines of thought, but they won't. Your mind is more unique than you know. No one is you; don't forget it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It's not that you have some burning piece of information to share, it's just that sharing anything is so important right now. Satisfy your craving to connect.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Attractions aren't always mutual, and even when they are it's not always so easy to make the connection. When it happens, it's something to celebrate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You see the opportunity in a situation but you're not an opportunist because what you notice is the opportunity to give, to help and to take an action that will raise everyone up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). People appreciate what you do for them, and it feels good to be around people who don't take you for granted. Just know that you are also loved, not for what you do, but just for being you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're sensitive to the energetic reality around you. You feel the shadows and either do something to lighten them or avoid them altogether. Be spiritually generous, but also know your limits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Negativity can be literally cleared away as you clean the environment. You'll be amazed at how much better you feel when everything is in its place and the surfaces are cleaned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Just as the wind moves stagnant energy outside, new influences move the stagnant energy of the mind. Reading, conversation and intellectual experiences are key to optimal health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Someone is thinking of you and in just the way you would most prefer. This is no accident; rather, you've shown people how you like to be treated and they've done as you wanted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You've wanted something for a long time. The way to get it is to stop trying. Change the focus for a while. Do other things that delight you. Take yourself out of the normal setting so there's no choice but to deal with elements unknown.

Both candidates were asked how they would attract new talent to the BHPD and BHPD, views on compensation, and how they would work with the City Council around the city budget to help attract top recruits.

“We have great pension benefits for both of them and non-compensation benefits,” Fisher noted. He would make suggestions for how to extend the force and expand active volunteer groups that expand the departments reach.

To make the city more attractive for police officers to come, Manaster suggested “creating incentives to stabilize businesses and help businesses substantially be assisted in the city to stay in the city. Those are all great things that there’s the potential for a treasurer to be able to spearhead given the acknowledgement by the City Council.” To boost economic recovery, Manaster believes that the treasurer could also act as a moderator and facilitator between individual businesses that contribute to the livability of the city and the council.

Fisher was asked about his role during the pandemic, and how it allowed him to provide relief to residents and businesses. In addition to the Business Recovery Task Force, Fisher was also active on the city’s Tourism/Hospitality/Restaurants Subcommittee and conducted outreach with several tenant associations.

“Fortunately, there wasn’t a very large impact on the treasury, the fiscal side of things, from the residents,” Fisher said. “There was on the commercial side, obviously, because of rent, although I’m proud to say that the value of real estate in Beverly Hills continued to go up throughout the pandemic, and property tax increased.”

While challengers spoke about the need to improve public safety, incumbents tried to contextualize crime trends and offer strident defenses of the city’s response.

“The increase in crime in Beverly Hills is not solely a Beverly Hills problem,” Mayor Robert Wunderlich said. “It’s a national problem. It’s a regional problem. Beverly Hills actually is vastly safer than our surrounding neighborhoods, both in terms of crime and in terms of homelessness. But I understand that safer is not enough.”

“As I hear some suggestions that are being put forward, I’m not hearing anything that we’re not already doing,” Wunderlich said. “Over the course of my five years on City Council, we increased the police budget by 40%.”

Wunderlich highlighted other safety measures the Council has supported or implemented, including adding more CCTV cameras and automatic license plate readers, hiring private armed security firms, rolling out a police drone program, and passing ordinances aimed at curtailing harassment related to public demonstrations.

Councilmember Lester Friedman added that the Council had also supported the city’s Fire Department, increasing and upgrading equipment and launching the nurse practitioner program.

To address recruitment issues, Planning Commission Chair Andy Licht suggested making working conditions more appealing to prospective candidates by reducing working hours.

Councilmember John Mirisch suggested that BHPD could use technology as a force multiplier, using artificial intelligence to monitor the city’s many CCTV camera feeds. He reiterated a recent suggestion of his to purchase more mobile command centers.

“If there are issues, whether it be protests or a rash of crimes, we can deploy mobile command systems wherever we need to strategically and that can be a base for more foot patrols,” he said.

The forum discussion also repeatedly touched on the southeast of the city, which sitting Councilmember John Mirisch described as the “the ugly stepchild” of Beverly Hills in comparison to the ritzy Business Triangle. All candidates agreed on the importance of attracting and retaining businesses in the area.

Public Works Commissioner Sharona Nazarian accused the Council of neglecting the southeast.

“There are certain areas in our business district that are kind of falling apart. You walk on South Beverly, and you look at the sidewalks and they’re really decrepit,” she said. “It’s not becoming of our city.”

Planning Commission Chair Andy Licht emphasized that the city itself can only encourage certain forms of development.

“We aren’t developers as a city, we’re only here to provide [the] opportunity to make it easier for developers to do and encourage them [to do] what we want them to do,” he said.

Mirisch, who is running for his fourth term, said that the city had failed to revitalize the southeast despite years of lip service. He suggested forming a Business Improvement District, an area in which businesses pay an additional tax to fund projects that serve local businesses and encourage commercial activity.

Councilmember Lester Friedman defended the Council’s efforts in the southeast, saying he had recently moved his business to Southeast Beverly Hills. “Could it be improved? Yes, it could be improved,” he said. “I just don’t see it as a decrepit area. I see it as an opportunity.”

Forum moderator David Mirharooni asked the candidates about the minimal impact of the 2020 Mixed-Use Ordinance, which allowed residential development in large commercial swaths of the city. Since its passage, the city has seen no mixed-use projects, with just two developers expressing an intention to file projects with the city.

All candidates other than Mirisch expressed some form of support for the concept of mixed-use in the city, with Friedman, Licht, and Wunderlich saying that the ordinance needed to be reviewed and possibly revamped.

While Vera Markowitz said she was “very much a proponent” of mixed use, she felt

The massive 9.7-acre property sits along the western border of the city on the north side of Angelo Drive, west of Benedict Canyon Drive. Warner started with just 3 acres in 1927, piecing together surrounding land over the years—a trend seemingly continued by Bezos, who purchased an adjacent property in July 2021 for $10 million.

Warner died in 1978 and Ann continued to live there until her own death in 1990. That same year, music mogul David Geffen purchased the home for $47.5 million, a record at the time, and then embarked on an extensive series of renovations and major alterations to the estate. Bezos, the latest power player to call 1801 Angelo home, shelled over a whopping $165 million to Geffen in 2020, setting a watermark for highest real estate transaction in California at the time.

The property has come before the Planning Commission for permits twice before in 1995 and 2014 seeking to go beyond the 15,000 square feet allowed by-right in the city. It currently has a floor area of nearly 29,000 square feet. A 1985 survey identified the Warner Estate as a potential historic resource, subjecting it to protections by the state for the purpose of preserving historic buildings.

The permits mark the first proposed changes to the property since Bezos moved in.

Despite the large-scale changes made by Geffen, a report on the property determined that the Council had passed the ordinance without sufficient transparency.

“If you go down any street here, no one knows what’s going on. We need to have better communication with our residents and our residents need to know what’s going on and mixed use is one of the big things,” she said.

Mirisch, the lone dissenting vote against the Mixed-Use Ordinance, reiterated his opposition to “upzoning.”

“We’re not Manhattan, we’re not Paris, we’re Beverly Hills, and we need to be the best version of Beverly Hills that we can be,” he said.

The second panel saw a smaller crowd than the first. Sitting beside right that it “retains sufficient integrity to convey its historic association with Jack L. Warner, and the main residence retains sufficient integrity to convey its historic Neoclassical style architecture designed by master architect Roland E. Coate.”

In his book “The Legendary Estates of Beverly Hills,” real estate agent Jeff Hyland opined about the residence, “No studio czar’s residence, before or since, has ever surpassed in size, grandeur, or sheer glamour the Jack Warner Estate on Angelo Drive in Benedict Canyon.”

The commission declined to allow construction parking along Angelo Drive, citing the ample space for parking on the property itself.

The commission next voted to recommend the City Council adopt the Safety Element, a state-mandated document that lays out plans and goals to keep the city and its residents safe in case of disaster. The Safety Element is a chapter of the city’s General Plan and is updated following updates to the city’s Housing Element. The city’s current Safety Element was adopted in 2010.

“As required by state law, this document has been updated to include information on topics such as climate change and hazards such as urban fires, floods and landslides,” said Associate City Planner Chloe Chen.

The Safety Element will next appear before the City Council for adoption at a later date. ● wing-activist and dance instructor Shiva Bagheri and businessman Kevin Kugly, technologist and financial planner Robin Rowe acknowledged the elephant in the room.

“I’m sitting at the table of the people who are not supposed to win,” he said. But much like his prior run for City Council in 2020, he said his goal was to give residents an option outside of the mainstream.

“I gave people a chance to vote for a candidate who was different,” he said. ●

DTSC PUBLIC NOTICE

DTSC's Mission is to protect California's people, communities, and environment from toxic substances, to enhance economic vitality by restoring contaminated land, and to compel manufacturers to make safer consumer products.
April 2022

REMOVAL ACTION IMPLEMENTATION

Union Pacific Railroad, Beverly Hills
9101 to 9350 N. Santa Monica Boulevard and 9100 to 9349 Civic Center Drive, Beverly Hills

The Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) will oversee the implementation of the approved Removal Action Workplan (RAW) for the Union Pacific Railroad (Site) located in Beverly Hills. The removal actions are to be implemented in an effective manner that is protective of the public health and safety and the environment.

WHAT IS PROPOSED?

The removal of 4,400 cubic yards of arsenic impacted soil is planned for the 5-acre fenced-in vacant Site as part of the RAW implementation. Site specific removal goals of 25 milligrams per kilogram of arsenic were selected based on approved DTSC cleanup guidelines. RAW implementation actions will remove arsenic contaminated soil through excavation and off-site disposal. Air dust monitoring will take place. Soil sampling for confirmation and to aid the excavation will be performed to be sure site-specific goals have been met. Lastly, a two-foot clean soil cover will be applied with future Site use consideration. Land Use Controls and Institutional Controls that restrict activities at the Site will be included.

CALIFORNIA ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY ACT (CEQA):

In compliance with CEQA, an Initial Study/Negative Declaration (IS/ND) was prepared and reviewed by DTSC. This IS/ND evaluated the RAW implementation activities and concluded they will not have a significant effect on human health and the environment.
